Known as the “People’s University,” NC State has developed into a vital educational and economic resource. A wealth of university outreach and extension programs provide services and education to all sectors of the state’s economy and its citizens. Consistently ranked a national best value and among the nation’s top 100 public universities, NC State is a pre-eminent research institution, attracting top faculty and students from around the world. Together with our public and private partners, we create economic, societal and intellectual prosperity.

History

Founded in 1887, NC State—then known as the North Carolina College of Agriculture and Mechanic Arts—began classes in the fall of 1889 with 72 students, six faculty and one building. Today, the university has nearly 34,000 students, 9,000 faculty and staff and more than 700 buildings.

In the early 1900s, two federal programs sparked a new era in extension and outreach work at the college. An agreement with the U.S. Department of Agriculture in 1909 led to what is now known as the 4-H program. The passage of the Smith-Lever Act in 1914 enabled land-grant colleges to establish state, county and local extension programs to further support their existing demonstration work, leading North Carolina to establish the Cooperative Agricultural Extension Service at State College.

Although the term “State College” had been in use for years, the broadening of the school’s teaching, research and extension activities led the Board of Trustees to officially adopt the name. By the 1920s, State College was beginning to grow beyond its original agricultural and mechanical focus, adding schools of engineering, science and business, textiles, education and a graduate school.

Despite the difficulties of the Great Depression as well as World War II, State College made contributions to the war effort by hosting a number of military detachments and training exercises, and refitting the work of several departments and programs to military and defense purposes. The campus experienced unparalleled growth during the postwar years as the G.I. Bill brought thousands of former servicemen to campus.

In the following decades, the college continued to expand its curricula, creating schools of design, forestry, physical science and mathematics, and humanities and social sciences. During these years of growth, the name was changed again—this time to North Carolina State University at Raleigh.

The university celebrated its 100th anniversary in 1987, which also saw the creation of Centennial Campus. Centennial brings together university and corporate leaders to engage in teaching, research and economic development.

Educational Leadership

Dr. Randy Woodson is North Carolina State University’s 14th chancellor. He has extensive experience as a member of university faculty and administration with a reputation for consensus building throughout his decades long career in higher education. A nationally recognized leader in bridging the gap between vision and action, he has led the development and implementation of the university’s strategic plan to improve student success, faculty excellence, and engagement and economic development.

Dr. Woodson received his B.S., M.S. and Ph.D. degrees in horticulture from the University of Arkansas and Cornell University, respectively, specializing in plant physiology.

He has contributed a wide body of knowledge to his field with research covering topics such as plant genetics, molecular biology, biotechnology and sustainable bioproducts development. His work has been published in over 100 journal articles and book chapters. His research has been featured in stories published in Businessweek, The Futurist and Discover.
Hillsborough Street is located along the border of North Campus. It links the city of Raleigh and the NC State community seamlessly while providing entertainment and services vital to our students. It’s no wonder that many of NC State’s most treasured traditions take place on Hillsborough Street. Check out pages 24-25 for venues on Hillsborough Street.

Memorial Bell Tower

Since its completion in 1937, the Memorial Bell Tower has stood as a symbol of identity for North Carolina State University, a timekeeper for tradition and a perpetual memorial to NC State students who gave their lives in defense of their country. As well as a memorial, the tower is a rallying point for students, faculty, staff, alumni and members of the university community. The Belltower is lit for holidays that honor our veterans, such as Memorial Day and Veterans’ Day, and to celebrate NC State’s proudest occasions and achievements such as: commencement, Founder’s Day, athletic victories and academic awards.

Packapalooza

One of NC State’s most cherished traditions is WolfPack Welcome Week, where the incoming class is welcomed with open arms. Each day of the week is filled with events and activities to help new students acclimate to the NC State community. The cap-stone event each year is Packapalooza, an all-day block party and street festival showcasing the best of NC State from sustainability, to arts, from academics to inflatables, games and of course great music.

Homecoming

Homecoming provides a weeklong series of traditions and community events that capture the things our students, faculty, staff, alumni and friends hold dear. Whether you’re an NC State student, graduate or fan, Homecoming is your chance to show that you bleed Wolfpack Red. The night before the big game is celebrated in style with a Homecoming parade down Hillsborough Street. Campus clubs, local organizations, sororities, fraternities, bands and special VIPs march down Hillsborough Street to pump up the Pack with true Wolfpack spirit.

Krispy Kreme Challenge

Started in 2004 as a dare between a few students, the Krispy Kreme Challenge not only tests participants physical stamina but also their intestinal fortitude. Competitors run two and a half miles to the nearest Krispy Kreme on Peace Street where they down a dozen doughnuts, and then run back, all in an hour to complete the challenge. Proceeds from the race go to the North Carolina Children’s Hospital. Participants sign up as a challenger, casual runner, doughnut supporter or volunteer. The race has become one of the most recognizable events at NC State and was featured in Sports Illustrated magazine’s “102 More Things You Gotta Do Before You Graduate” and NC State’s “54 Things to do at NC State.”
NC State receives both freshman and transfer student applications each year from across the state of North Carolina, the United States, and internationally. The admissions office employs a holistic approach in reviewing students’ applications. Competitive freshman applicants take a rigorous curriculum and maintain a strong GPA throughout high school. The most competitive transfer applicants have at least 30 hours of transferable credits and meet their requested program’s unique GPA and course recommendations. However, we also consider a range of accomplishments and qualifications when reviewing both freshman and transfer student applications.

Visit admissions.ncsu.edu for more information about the application process.

NC State welcomes all people regardless of ethnicity, race, national origin, age, gender, sexual orientation, socioeconomic background, religion or disability. While these categories may be important parts of our identities, they aren’t the whole story. Instead, we choose to be defined by our excellence and our commitment to growth. Because diversity is what makes our lives richer and gives us the chance to advance our university, NC State strives to be more diverse in hopes of creating a culture that values empathy, respect, tolerance and equality for all. In doing this, we serve as pioneers in a much larger way, paving the road for a more diverse and inclusive world—both at home and abroad.

In order to achieve our university goals and to prepare students for the global workplace that awaits them after leaving NC State, we create a campus climate and overall sense of global awareness that encourages and embraces all forms of diversity. We are committed to the collective pursuit of excellence through acceptance of both individuals and ideas that may be different than our own, for these are the items that will continue to move this outstanding institution forward.
Outreach and Extension

As North Carolina’s flagship research intensive, community engaged land-grant university, NC State has a unique mission to serve the citizens of this state. This occurs through technical assistance, professional development, lifelong education, technology transfer, and other means of applying knowledge to real world issues and problems.

Faculty, students and staff from our academic and administrative units engage in collaborative research, learning and service partnerships with business, industry, government and communities, in the Triangle region and across the state. Extension and engagement initiatives include economic development, environmental stewardship, K-12 education, leadership development and entrepreneurial support. NC State’s Office of Extension, Engagement, and Economic Development reaches over one million citizens annually through Cooperative Extension, Industrial Extension, the McKimmon Center for Extension and Continuing Education, NC State’s Economic Development Partnership, the General Hugh Shelton Leadership Center, and the North Carolina Small Business and Technology Development Center.

Knowledge turns into power when people use it to make their lives better. That’s what North Carolina Cooperative Extension is all about—extending knowledge from the state’s land-grant universities to you, your family and your community. Extension agents at centers in all 100 counties and the Cherokee Reservation, and the Extension specialists at NC State and NC A&T, are working together to help North Carolinians develop new agribusiness ventures, improve their health and family life, and sustain the environment.

Working together, we can achieve more than we can alone.
Research at NC State is a foundation of our culture. Our identity is based on a reputation for excellence in research and our teaching is enhanced by the presence of a strong research culture. Research at NC State is an economic engine as well. NC State discoveries have resulted in more than 660 patents and over 70 companies that employ more than 13,000 people.

NC State research developments include:

- The world’s first synthetic aorta
- The prototype for an artificial retina
- A blood cholesterol test that more accurately measures the risk of heart disease.
- Statistical models that will aid in designing new treatment strategies for HIV patients
- Lighter, fire-resistant and biological agent-resistant turnout gear for first responders
- Statistical software that led to the creation of SAS, the world’s largest privately held software company
- A permanent nanocoating that, when exposed to light, kills or inactivates bacteria and viruses
- Genomic sequences of the rice plant and its greatest enemy – the rice-blast disease pathogen

These discoveries are not arrived at in a vacuum, but arise from the collaboration and partnership between great minds and leaders. On Centennial Campus, a national model for university research campuses for more than 20 years, research drives innovation daily as more than 1,800 corporate and government employees work alongside a thousand-plus NC State faculty, staff, post-docs, and students. Centennial Campus houses more than 100 companies, government agencies, and NC State research and academic units, including the colleges of Engineering, Textiles and Veterinary Medicine.

In 2016, North Carolinians voted to pass the Connect NC bond referendum. Two-thirds of the Connect NC bond is funding critical improvements in higher education, with $160 million going to NC State to support agriculture and engineering, two critical drivers of economic development and jobs across North Carolina. These and other projects funded by the $2 billion are coming with no tax increase for the state’s citizens. With funding from the bond and support from private donors, NC State will build the new Plant Sciences Initiative and the Engineering Oval building, hubs of innovation that will allow North Carolina to remain a national leader in engineering and emerge as a world leader in plant sciences. When North Carolina voters last approved a higher education bond, their decision reshaped campus and reinvigorated the state. Construction projects funded in 2000 were integral to sustaining NC State’s cutting-edge education, research and scholarship. They built the academic core of our Centennial Campus, a nation-leading research campus and economic engine where government, industry, nonprofit and academic partners come together to seek solutions to the world’s greatest challenges.
Service

Community service is an integral part of life at NC State. The principles of leadership, service, ethics and commitment guide many of our academic offerings, aided in part by a campus wide Service-Learning Initiative.

NC State has a rich history of service. That commitment to community and reciprocity continues with the Center for Excellence in Curricular Engagement. Working together, faculty, students and community members will address community-identified issues and through critical reflection, engender personal growth, academic and civic learning as well as enhance capacity for individual and collective learning, critical thinking and leadership.

The Center for Student Leadership, Ethics & Public Service (CSLEPS) sponsors workshops, seminars, conferences, speakers and special events throughout the year while linking students with local and global volunteer opportunities in areas like animal protection, environmental concerns, elder issues, education, healthcare, hunger, mentoring, tutoring and other fields. The center also sponsors NC State's most popular student service option, the Alternative Service Break Program. This initiative encourage students to devote their semester breaks to service projects locally and abroad, often working with outside organizations such as Habitat for Humanity and Stop Hunger Now.

Service Raleigh, another university wide initiative, links the NC State community with local volunteer opportunities, giving students, faculty and staff a chance to give back to the city we call home. NC State volunteers contribute thousands of hours to projects that include working in homeless shelters, painting nursing homes, distributing fliers for multiple sclerosis societies and helping with campus beautification. Held at the beginning of each fall semester, Service NC State welcomes new students to campus and pairs students, faculty, staff and the community together to bag meals for the undernourished.

Hunt Library

The Hunt Library turns the traditional library on its head, giving NC State students, faculty and staff a state-of-the-art space for learning, research, collaboration and more.

Library features include:

- The bookBot, a robotic, automated book delivery system that houses up to two million items and can deliver an item within five minutes of a user choosing it from the online catalog.
- Technology-rich spaces where students and faculty can do pioneering work in a large-scale visualization and simulation.
- Videoconferencing and multimedia production facilities that encourage collaboration across locations and mastery of the latest audio and video tools.

Raleigh isn’t your typical Southern town. It blends the fun and excitement of a big city with the hospitality and charm of a small town. North Carolina’s capital city is located in the heart of the state’s Triangle, a hotbed for education, research and innovation.

One of the fastest growing cities in the United States, Raleigh is a city of contrasts beginning with its location. Situated midway between the Blue Ridge Mountains and the Atlantic Ocean, the beach and the mountains are never more than a two- to three-hour drive away. Though, if you want to go a bit further than North Carolina’s borders, the Raleigh-Durham International Airport is just minutes away.

With world-class theatres, museums, trendy restaurants, major sports teams like the Carolina Hurricanes and multinational businesses—plus a climate that’s mild year round, it’s easy to see why Raleigh is consistently rated among the best places to live and work in the United States.
Interested in taking a dip in the 40° waters of Lake Raleigh on Centennial Campus? Then the Polar Plunge is for you! The plunge is a unique opportunity for individuals, organizations and businesses to support Special Olympics North Carolina athletes. First organized in 2006, the event attracts more than one hundred people willing to take the plunge in late February along with over 800 runners/walkers participating in a 5K. This event kicks off the NC State Police Department’s fundraising efforts to benefit the North Carolina Law Enforcement Torch Run for Special Olympics. Now part of the Wolfpack Gives Back campaign, the event continues to expand in popularity.

NC State has its own 18-hole championship golf course and clubhouse on Centennial Campus that offers the most spectacular views of the Raleigh skyline! The Lonnie Poole Golf Course and Carol Johnson Poole Clubhouse are public facilities designed to provide the NC State community and golfing public access to a championship golf course playable for all skill levels. The elegantly appointed clubhouse features a full-service golf shop and indoor training facilities, a full-service restaurant and bar, and lots of meeting space for special events and more. The outdoor fireplace and fire pit patio overlooking downtown Raleigh provide the perfect spot to relax and enjoy the view. The golf course was designed by the Arnold Palmer Design Company and is designated an Audubon Signature Sanctuary. It was voted Best New Golf Course in North Carolina (2010) by the NC Golf Panel, and Golfweek has voted the course one of the top 30 college/university golf courses in the world every year since opening. It serves myriad purposes in support of academic and athletic excellence at NC State, providing a home course for the men’s and women’s golf teams, and teaching and training facility for the College of Agriculture and Life Sciences and the PGA Golf Management Program in the College of Natural Resources. The entire facility was built with private donations and totaled over $16 million. The lead donations for the golf course and clubhouse was provided by Lonnie Poole and his wife, Carol Johnson Poole.

Since the first football game in 1892, North Carolina State University has competed at the highest level of college athletics, winning two NCAA national championships, two AIAW titles and four other national championships. We’ve also produced Olympic medalists in swimming as well as 26 individual NCAA and AIAW national champions in a variety of sports. NC State competes in 23 intercollegiate varsity sports and is a founding member and competitor in one of the nation’s premier leagues the Atlantic Coast Conference. The university’s “Wolfpack” athletics teams are nationally recognized and enjoy a tradition of excellence both on the field and in the classroom.

Men’s varsity sports include soccer, cross country and football in the fall; basketball, swimming, indoor track and wrestling in the winter; and outdoor track, golf, tennis and baseball in the spring. Varsity sports for women include soccer, cross country and volleyball in the fall; basketball, indoor track, swimming and gymnastics in the winter; and track, golf, softball and tennis in the spring. The co-ed rifle team competes during the winter. For more information on university athletics, visit www.gopack.com.
Red and White for Life

The day students enroll at NC State they join a community for life. The pride, loyalty, and relationships that they build on campus will long outlast their student days. They are for life.

Former students stay Red & White for Life as members of the Alumni Association. When former students join the alumni association it builds a stronger university.

Members have a more powerful alumni network through events and reunions. They aid in student scholarships and faculty awards and stay up-to-date on the university through the NC State magazine.

Each year, more than 6,400 new graduates join the Wolfpack family of alumni. Collectively, the 175,000-plus NC State alumni represent a diverse community throughout the world.

For information about joining the Alumni Association, visit: www.alumni.ncsu.edu or call 1.800.627.2586.

Park Alumni Center

The Dorothy and Roy Park Alumni Center, built on the southern shore of Centennial Campus’ Lake Raleigh, is an elegant destination for a business lunch and a prime location for reunions, post-game receptions, parties and seminars. The building features Italian marble flooring, double curving staircases and a grand reception room with a full wall of windows onto the lake.

The State Club restaurant is open to the public Monday - Friday from 11 a.m. - 2 p.m. with a delicious menu of appetizers, salads, sandwiches, entrees and desserts. Sit by the fireplace or enjoy the lake view on the patio. While a membership is not required to dine for lunch or hold an event, State Club members enjoy exclusive dinner and social events. For more information, contact the State Club at 919.515.0552 or visit www.thestateclub.org.
